

Let's Celebrate 30th Anniversary of The Federation of the Asian Veterinary Associations

Achariya Sailasuta*

FAVA's vision will be recognised by the public as an unified professional association servicing the veterinary needs of the region and the mission is to enhance the quality of people's life in the region through responsible animal care and welfare by a unified professional association.

The Federation of Asian Veterinary Associations, FAVA is an organization in the Asia and Oceania with 80,000 members. The activities are regularly promoting academic activities and collaborating agro-veterinary-industry sector for the improvement of veterinary profession in the region. The Federation of Asian Veterinary Associations (FAVA) was founded in 1978 in Manila, Philippines. The Thai Veterinary Medical Association under the Royal Patronage, TVMA has been a FAVA member since 1984.

The FAVA's members are Australian Veterinary Association (AVA), Bangladesh Veterinary Association (BVA), Hong Kong Veterinary Association (HKVA), Indian Veterinary Association (IVA), Indonesian Veterinary Association (IVA), Veterinary Association of Malaysia (VAM), Korea Veterinary Medical Association (KVMA), Mongolian Veterinary Medical Association (MVMA), New Zealand Veterinary Association (NZVA), Japan Veterinary Medical Association (JVMA), Federation of Veterinary Association of Pakistan (FVAP), Philippines Veterinary Medical Association (PVMA), Singapore Veterinary Association (SVA), Sri Lanka Veterinary Association (SrVA), Taiwan Veterinary Medical Association (TVMA), Thai Veterinary Medical Association (TVMA) and Vietnam Veterinary Medical Association (VNMA). The present president of FAVA is Dr. Jim Edwards, New Zealand Veterinary Association and Dr. Pratuang Sudsakorn, president of TVMA, will be the next president in this coming October 2008.

The FAVA's Values are to coordinate and facilitate technical assistance for FAVA member associations, to establish mutually beneficial relationships with local and international agro-veterinary industries, to encourage veterinarians to provide quality veterinary services and educate the public i.e FAVA congress every two years, publishing information and arranging the training program that facilitate improvement of veterinary education relevant to the region.

While, the world has rapid communication, FAVA have tried to respond by developing the FAVA web site; www.asianvet.com, which is now visited by many people from all over the world and forms the basis of contact for many of our organisations. Issues must be addressed by FAVA in a manner which respects the country associations who are members. FAVA have encouraged the adoption of improved animal welfare network in our region and finding sources of information to assist in developing plans for emergency diseases as well as codes of welfare for different animal species. Other areas of mutual interest are veterinary nursing as well as standards for livestock and laboratory technicians.

FAVA has now developed a linkage with the World Veterinary Association and World Small Animal Veterinary Association (WSAVA). This connection needs to continue to exploit its influence through linkages and sharing of information and ideas. In this way, FAVA can work together to achieve our vision of being a unified professional association servicing the veterinary needs of the region. Finally, on behalf of TVMA, we wish to thank all member associations for their valuable contributions. We realize that it is sometimes difficult to contribute, but everyone has always done their best and we can be proud of our collective achievements.
